

Statistics for the SDGs - global indicators

Target 3.d Strengthen the capacity of all countries, in particular developing countries, for early warning, risk reduction and management of national and global health risks International Health Regulations (IHR) are a set of guidelines, rights and obligations imposed on both on the states and the World Health Organization (WHO). Unit points International Health Regulations (IHR) were adopted by the 58th World Health Assembly in 23rd of May 2005 in Geneva. They are a set of guidelines, rights and obligations imposed on both the states and the World Health Organization (WHO). International Health Regulations (IHR) were adopted by the 58th World Health Assembly in 23rd of May 2005 in Geneva. They are a set of guidelines, rights and obligations imposed on both the states and the World Health Organization (WHO). International Health Regulations aim at combating and preventing the spread of diseases on an international scale by applying proportionate measures to avoid unnecessary interference with international transport. These regulations regulate the transmission and exchange of information on health hazards between the countries that are party to it and set new standards for preventing the spread of infectious diseases. According to the Article 4 of the International Health Regulations, Poland, as each Member State of the WHO (State Party), designates or establishes the National Institute of Hygiene. The Chief Sanitary Inspectorate co-operates with the National Institute of Hygiene. The Chief Sanitary Inspectorate co-operates with the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations was established at the National institute of Public Health - National Institute of Hygiene. The Chief Sanitary Inspectorate co-operates with the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations are required to comply with the provisions of the International Health Regulations. The quality and level of the following attributes are taken into account in assessing the implementation of the International Health Reg	Name of the indicator	3.d.1 International Health Regulations (IHR) capacity and health emergency preparedness
Definition marning, risk reduction and management of national and global health risks international Health Regulations (IHR) are a set of guidelines, rights and obligations imposed on both on the states and the World Health Organization (WHO). Doints Available dimensions International Health Regulations (IHR) were adopted by the 58th World Health Assembly in 23rd of May 2005 in Geneva. They are a set of guidelines, rights and obligations imposed on both the states and the World Health Organization (WHO). International Health Regulations aim at combating and preventing the spread of diseases on an international scale by applying proportionate measures to available unnecessary interference with international transprot. These regulations regulate the transmission and exchange of information on health hazards between the countries that are party to it and set new standards for preventing the spread of infectious diseases. According to the Article 4 of the International Health Regulations. Poland, as each Member State of the WHO (State Party), designates or establishes the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations. The National Focal Point for International Health Regulations was established at the National Institute of Public Health - National Focal Point for International Health Regulations, so that they receive information about events that pose public health threats to the international sign. Methodological explanations Methodological explanations The quality and level of the following attributes are taken into account in assessing the implementation of the International Health Regulations: 1. national legislation, policy and financing, 2. 2. coordination and National Focal Point communications, 3. 3. surveillance, 4. 4. response, 5. 5. preparedness, 6. 6. insk communication, 7. 7. human resources, 8. 8. laboratory, 9. 9. points of entry, 10. 10. 2 conotic events, 11. 11. food safety, 12. 12. chemical events, 13. 13. radionuclear emergencies.	Sustainable Development Goal	Goal 3. Good health and well-being
Unit points International Health Regulations (IHR) were adopted by the 58th World Health Assembly in 23rd of May 2005 in Geneva. They are a set of guidelines, rights and obligations imposed on both the states and the World Health Organization (WHO). International Health Regulations aim at combating and preventing the spread of diseases on an international scale by applying proportionate measures to avoid unnecessary interference with international transport. These regulations regulate the transmission and exchange of information on health hazards between the countries that are party to it and set new standards for preventing the spread of infectious diseases. According to the Article 4 of the International Health Regulations, Poland, as each Member State of the WHO (State Party), designates or establishes the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations was established at the National Institute of Public Health - National Institute of Hygiene. The Chief Sanitary Inspectorate co-operates with the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations, so that they receive information about events that pose public health threats to the international sign. Methodological explanations Methodological explanations International Health Regulations are taken into account in assessing the implementation of the International Health Regulations. The quality and level of the following attributes are taken into account in assessing the implementation of the International Health Regulations: 1. 1. national legislation, policy and financing, 2. 2. coordination and National Focal Point communications, 3. 3. surveillance, 4. 4. response, 5. 5. preparedness, 6. 6. risk communication, 7. 7. human resources, 8. 8. laboratory, 9. 9. points of entry, 10. 10. 2 oponotic events, 11. 11. food safety, 12. 12. chemical events, 13. 13. radionuclear emergencies.	Target
International Health Regulations (IHR) were adopted by the 58th World Health Assembly in 23rd of May 2005 in Geneva. They are a set of guidelines, rights and obligations imposed on both the states and the World Health Organization (WHO). International Health Regulations aim at combating and preventing the spread of diseases on an international scale by applying proportionate measures to avoid unnecessary interference with international transport. These regulations regulate the transmission and exchange of information on health hazards between the countries that are party to it and set new standards for preventing the spread of infectious diseases. According to the Article 4 of the International Health Regulations, Poland, as each Member State of the WHO (State Party), designates or establishes the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations was established at the National Institute of Public Health - National Institute of Hygiene. The Chief Sanitary Inspectorate co-operates with the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations, so that they receive information about events that pose public health threats to the international sign. Methodological explanations Methodological explanations Methodological explanations In the state of the United States of the International Health Regulations, so that they receive information about events that pose public health threats to the international sign. Since 15th of June 2007, all countries that have ratified the WHO Convention, including Poland, are required to comply with the provisions of the International Health Regulations. 1. 1. national legislation, policy and financing, 2. 2. coordination and National Focal Point communications, 3. 3. surveillance, 4. 4. response, 5. 5. preparedness, 6. 6. risk communication, 7. 7. human resources, 8. 8. Islaboratory, 9. 9. points of entry, 10. 10. 2 zoonotic events, 11. 11. food safety, 12. 12. chemical events, 13. 13. radionuclear emergencies.	Definition
International Health Regulations (IHR) were adopted by the 58th World Health Assembly in 23rd of May 2005 in Geneva. They are a set of guidelines, rights and obligations imposed on both the states and the World Health Organization (WHO). International Health Regulations aim at combating and preventing the spread of diseases on an international scale by applying proportionate measures to avoid unnecessary interference with international transport. These regulations regulate the transmission and exchange of information on health hazards between the countries that are party to it and set new standards for preventing the spread of infectious diseases. According to the Article 4 of the International Health Regulations, Poland, as each Member State of the WHO (State Party), designates or establishes the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations. The National Focal Point for International Health Regulations was established at the National Institute of Public Health - National Institute of Hygiene. The Chief Sanitary Inspectorate co-operates with the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations, so that they receive information about events that pose public health threats to the international sign. Since 15th of June 2007, all countries that have ratified the WHO Convention, including Poland, are required to comply with the provisions of the International Health Regulations. The quality and level of the following attributes are taken into account in assessing the implementation of the International Health Regulations: 1. 1. national legislation, policy and financing, 2. 2. coordination and National Focal Point communications, 3. 3. surveillance, 4. 4. response, 5. 5. preparedness, 6. 6. risk communication, 7. 7. human resources, 8. 8. laboratory, 9. 9. points of entry, 10. 10. 2conotic events, 11. 11. food safety, 12. 12. chemical events, 13. 13. radionuclear emergencies.	Unit	points
Assembly in 23rd of May 2005 in Geneva. They are a set of guidelines, rights and obligations imposed on both the states and the World Health Organization (WHO). International Health Regulations aim at combating and preventing the spread of diseases on an international scale by applying proportionate measures to avoid unnecessary interference with international transport. These regulations regulate the transmission and exchange of information on health hazards between the countries that are party to it and set new standards for preventing the spread of infectious diseases. According to the Article 4 of the International Health Regulations, Poland, as each Member State of the WHO (State Party), designates or establishes the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations was established at the National Institute of Public Health - National Institute of Hygiene. The Chief Sanitary Inspectorate co-operates with the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations, so that they receive information about events that pose public health threats to the international sign. Methodological explanations Methodological explanations Since 15th of June 2007, all countries that have ratified the WHO Convention, including Poland, are required to comply with the provisions of the International Health Regulations. The quality and level of the following attributes are taken into account in assessing the implementation of the International Health Regulations: 1. 1. national legislation, policy and financing, 2. 2. coordination and National Focal Point communications, 3. 3. surveillance, 4. 4. response, 5. 5. preparedness, 6. 6. risk communication, 7. 7. human resources, 8. 8. laboratory, 9. 9. points of entry, 10. 10. zoonotic events, 11. 11. food safety, 12. 12. chemical events, 13. 13. radionuclear emergencies.	Available dimensions
-	Methodological explanations	Assembly in 23rd of May 2005 in Geneva. They are a set of guidelines, rights and obligations imposed on both the states and the World Health Organization (WHO). International Health Regulations aim at combating and preventing the spread of diseases on an international scale by applying proportionate measures to avoid unnecessary interference with international transport. These regulations regulate the transmission and exchange of information on health hazards between the countries that are party to it and set new standards for preventing the spread of infectious diseases. According to the Article 4 of the International Health Regulations, Poland, as each Member State of the WHO (State Party), designates or establishes the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations was established at the National Institute of Public Health - National Institute of Hygiene. The Chief Sanitary Inspectorate co-operates with the National Focal Point for International Health Regulations, so that they receive information about events that pose public health threats to the international sign. Since 15th of June 2007, all countries that have ratified the WHO Convention, including Poland, are required to comply with the provisions of the International Health Regulations. The quality and level of the following attributes are taken into account in assessing the implementation of the International Health Regulations: 1. 1. national legislation, policy and financing, 2. 2. coordination and National Focal Point communications, 3. 3. surveillance, 4. 4. response, 5. 5. preparedness, 6. 6. risk communication, 7. 7. human resources, 8. 8. laboratory, 9. 9. points of entry, 10. 10. zoonotic events, 11. 11. food safety, 12. chemical events, 13. 13. radionuclear emergencies.
Data availability Annual data since 2010.	Data source	World Health Organization
	Data availability	Annual data since 2010.

Statistics for the SDGs - global indicators

V	otes
---	------	--

File generated: 27-03-2020, 07:31